WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

A cold upper level trough is now over the coast of Canada and will track southeast into Oregon tonight then Nevada on Monday. This will result in below normal temperatures and breezy northerly winds for our area with mostly cloudy to cloudy skies a high probability of occasional showers and snow showers of very light intensity through Monday. Moisture wrapping around the back side of the trough will continue a slight chance to chance of very light showers and snow showers mainly East of the Cascades Monday night into Tuesday night. A ridge will follow Wednesday into early Saturday with warm and dry weather. Model differences increase regarding the forecast for next weekend but the general trend will be for the upper level pattern to become more progressive with frontal systems of weak to moderate strength arriving in a Westerly flow.

Eureka Weather:

A cold front slowly moving south over the area will bring some showers and cooler temperatures today and Monday. A warming trend begins Tuesday as a high pressure builds over the West Coast.

Reno Weather:

Mild temperatures continue today with breezy winds this afternoon and evening. A low and its accompanying cold front drop south early Monday morning. Bands of snow are likely with the front. While the exact location of the heaviest snow remains in question, it will likely be in the vicinity of the I-80 and Highway 50 corridors. The upper low will meander around the region through Wednesday with scattered showers each day and below average temperatures.

San Francisco Weather:

Cooler conditions are forecast across the region today through Wednesday as an upper trough develops over the western United States. Precipitation associated with this trough is expected to remain to the north and east of the San Francisco bay area and central coast. Blustery conditions can be expected near the coast during the afternoon and early evening hours both today and Monday. A warming trend is forecast for the second half of the week.

Sacramento Weather:

A cool weather system from the North may bring a few showers across the Northern Mountains, Northern Sierra and foothills and the Eastern Sacramento Valley today with a slight chance of thunderstorms over the valley and foothills. The Mountain shower threat continues through mid-week with minor snow impacts expected over the Sierra. Dry with warmer temperatures the end of the week with next chance of precipitation early next week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to provide dry weather and above normal temperatures through the remainder of this weekend. Temperatures will cool to a little below average by Monday with a chance for light showers mainly over the Sierra Nevada.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A cooling trend will begin on Sunday followed by below normal temperatures for early next week as low pressure approaches from the North. An increase in cloud coverage is likely through Monday as well. Warming is expected for the second half of next week as high pressure builds aloft.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Dry weather will continue into tonight under weakening high pressure. For Monday through Wednesday a cold low pressure system moving southward through the Western States will bring stronger onshore flow for Southern California with cooling increasing humidities with small chances for mainly light precipitation along and west of the mountains and periods of gusty West winds in the mountains and deserts strongest for Monday afternoon and night. Warmer and dry towards the end of next week as high pressure aloft returns along the West Coast.

Southeast California Weather:

Quiet weather is expected today before a more potent low pressure system will impact our weather Monday into Friday bringing strong gusty winds Monday afternoon isolated precipitation chances Tuesday through Thursday and much cooler temperatures. Warmer and drier conditions are expected late as high pressure begins to build into the area from the West with high temperatures climbing back into the 80s by Saturday.
